

Halton Lune Trust

The Halton Lune Trust is pleased to report that the Revd Jonathan Sewell has been appointed as the new Chair. He is a member of the Halton with Aughton Parish Council, having lived in the Village for the last twelve years. Brought up in a rural Cumbrian village, his father ran the local Limestone Quarry at Kirkby Stephen on the Pennines. As an undergraduate at Lancaster University, he regularly canoed at the Halton weir. little did he know that he would retire to the village many years later.

His working life was mostly as a Clergyman in London, Winchester and Oxford, also working for the NHS and Prison Services as a Chaplain. For leisure he teaches sailing, cycles and fell walks. He enjoys acting, currently in "Ladies Day" at Lancaster Grand Theatre and is an occasional Film Extra.

Jonathan writes: "Our Villages are extremely privileged to have the benefit of the Halton Lune Hydro and I am pleased to assist in advising as to how grants from the project are awarded.

Some members of our parish have begun to make regular donations to the Trust, we welcome any donations or bequests that may be received furthering the Trust's objectives."
